

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A liquid dispenser includes an elongated tube formed with a first opening, and a closed shell connected to the tube and formed with a second opening 5 aligned axially with and in fluid communication with the first opening. The shell has a portion that is resilient and that is compressible so as to generate a suction force when the portion is pressed and is subsequently released.